DETAILED ACTION

Election/Restrictions

1. Restriction to one of the following inventions is required under 35 U.S.C. 121:
  - I. Claims 1-8, 14-16 drawn to a method of web accessing to a remote program, classified in class 719, subclass 310.
  - II. Claims 10, 12, 17-19 drawn to a method for invoking an object and transmitting the invocation to a client program, classified in class 719, subclass 315.
  - III. Claims 9, 11, drawn to a method for transforming data in a first markup language into a second markup language, classified in class 715, subclass 523.
  - IV. Claim 13, drawn to a method for display a response to an invocation of a remote program, classified in class 345, subclass 740.

The inventions are distinct, each from the other because of the following reasons:

2. Inventions I and III are related as combination and subcombination. Inventions in this relationship are distinct if it can be shown that (1) the combination as claimed does not require the particulars of the subcombination as claimed for patentability, and (2) that the subcombination has utility by itself or in other combinations (MPEP § 806.05(c)). In the instant case, the combination as claimed does not require the particulars of the subcombination as claimed because the web access to remote program does not require a transformation of a first markup language to a second markup language. The subcombination has separate utility such as providing a tool for using a file in any markup language via the transforming feature.

3. Inventions II and IV are related as combination and subcombination. Inventions in this relationship are distinct if it can be shown that (1) the combination as claimed does not require the particulars of the subcombination as claimed for patentability, and (2) that the subcombination has utility by itself or in other combinations (MPEP § 806.05(c)). In the instant case, the combination as claimed does not require the particulars of the subcombination as claimed because invoking an object and transmitting the invocation to a client program does not require displaying a response to an invocation in HyperText Markup Language. The subcombination has separate utility such as using a HyperText Markup Language in creating a received response.

4. Inventions I and III are related as subcombinations disclosed as usable together in a single combination. The subcombinations are distinct from each other if they are shown to be separately usable. In the instant case, invention III has separate utility such as transforming data of a first markup language to a second markup language whereas invention I is for accessing a remote program on the web. See MPEP § 806.05(d).

5. Inventions I and IV are related as subcombinations disclosed as usable together in a single combination. The subcombinations are distinct from each other if they are shown to be separately usable. In the instant case, invention IV has separate utility such as displaying a response to an invocation of a remote program whereas invention I is for accessing a remote program on the web. See MPEP § 806.05(d).

6. Because these inventions are distinct for the reasons given above and have acquired a separate status in the art as shown by their different classification, restriction for examination purposes as indicated is proper.

7. Because these inventions are distinct for the reasons given above and the search required for Group I is not required for Groups II, III, or IV, restriction for examination purposes as indicated is proper.

8. Because these inventions are distinct for the reasons given above and have acquired a separate status in the art because of their recognized divergent subject matter, restriction for examination purposes as indicated is proper.

9. A telephone call was made to Brian Rothery on 10/15/04 to request an oral election to the above restriction requirement, but did not result in an election being made.

Applicant is advised that the reply to this requirement to be complete must include an election of the invention to be examined even though the requirement be traversed (37 CFR 1.143).

10. Any inquiry concerning this communication or earlier communications from the examiner should be directed to Cong-Lac Huynh whose telephone number is 571-272-4125. The examiner can normally be reached on Mon-Fri (8:30-6:00).

Art Unit: 2178
